Hi,
We are considering using OPEN Vino and the pre-trained models that come along for a commercial project.
I would like to know weather Open vino is free for use on a commercial project.
We also plan on using the pretrained models available at
Would also like to know if the pretrained models can be deployed for a commercial project.

Hi @Oniel

Open Model Zoo pre-trained models are distributed through Apache 2.0 open-source license: https://github.com/openvinotoolkit/open_model_zoo/blob/master/LICENSE

OpenVINO toolkit components are available via EULA (in case of using Intel Distribution) and open-source Apache 2.0 (open source distribution).

Thank you.
Best regards, Max.

I'll start by saying this is not legal advice, and you should contact a professional in these legal areas to help you.
As stated on their github repository, OpenVINO is released under the Apache License 2.0

You can clearly see from that link that this license allows commercial use.
The provided pre-trained models are available from the OpenVINO™ Toolkit - Open Model Zoo repository, which has the same Apache License 2.0.

Intel is encouraging the use of these models:

- 1 | Use these free pre-trained models instead of training your own models to speed-up the development and production deployment process.
